Interdisciplinary Foundations of Media Theory

MEDIASTU 9100A 001 GF21 Course Outline – Fall 2021

Friday, 9:00am – 11:50am, FNB 4130

Instructor: Prof. Tom Streeter, Faculty of Information & Media Studies, FNB 4091, Western University

Phone: 519-661-2111x84347; email: tstreet2@uwo.ca

Office hours by appointment, and when possible in an open space in or near FNB. By zoom if necessary.

This course provides an introduction to scholarly theories of media and information, with a focus on how to read, understand, and use scholarly theories. It is organized more to help you develop your own capacities to make sense of theories than it is a comprehensive summary of all theories relevant to the field. Because Media Studies MA students are expected to conduct a research project under the supervision of a FIMS faculty member, many of the readings are by FIMS faculty members, and many of the theories discussed will be intended to help you better understand the scholarship of FIMS faculty.

You'll notice that some of the readings are not the most current; that's on purpose. I believe that scholarship emerges from and is responsible to its past, its historical context. I find it useful and sometimes necessary to read works that are decades old.

Assignments will include an essay (20%), guiding a class discussion (15%), class participation and weekly reading reactions (20%), and a term paper (45%). (More details are below and online.)

What will the class be like? This class is a seminar; I will occasionally lecture a bit, but most of what happens will involve discussion, and students will have some responsibility to help generate and sustain discussion. The current plan is that we'll be wearing masks. We're hoping that things will keep moving in the direction of a more open situation, but the pandemic remains a strange and challenging situation for all of us. It will take some patience, effort, flexibility, and mutual respect all around to make it work. We may have to make mid-course corrections and changes to adjust for unanticipated issues, small or large. But I will do my best to make this a rich, engaging, and rewarding exploration of an important crossroads in the world of ideas, and with a little help from you, I suspect it will work.

Assignments

- Essay: In a roughly 1000 word essay, explicate the theory or theories, explicit and implicit, of one or more of the articles in the collection of FIMS faculty scholarship on the recommended reading list (and which is not one you are writing about in Prof. Grzyb's course on methods). Due on or before the date the article is listed on the syllabus. (Sign up before the second class.) 20%
- Guide a class discussion: twice during the semester, you will guide a class discussion of one, or in a few cases if they are short, two of the required readings during the semester. We will sign up for these early in the semester. 7.5% x2 = 15%

- Participation and weekly reading reactions: thoughtful participation in class discussion is an expectation, and to help with that, you will be required to post 8 short reading responses (approx. 250 words) to the discussion board on OWL by midnight the day before the relevant class. (These will not be graded individually, but will contribute to your overall discussion grade.) 20%
- Term Paper: All students will write a term paper of approximately 5000 words focused on a particular a theoretical dispute or problem area in a media studies sub-field. The paper will be presented to the class on Dec. 10th, the last day of class, and the final draft will be due no later than Dec. 17th. 45%

Statement on Academic Offences: Scholastic offences are taken seriously and students are directed to read the appropriate policy, specifically, the definition of what constitutes a Scholastic Offence, at the following Web site: http://www.uwo.ca/univsec/pdf/academic_policies/appeals/scholastic_discipline_grad.pdf

In the unlikely case I use plagiarism detection software: All required papers may be subject to submission for textual similarity review to the commercial plagiarism-detection software under license to the University for the detection of plagiarism. All papers submitted for such checking will be included as source documents in the reference database for the purpose of detecting plagiarism of papers subsequently submitted to the system. Use of the service is subject to the licensing agreement, currently between The University of Western Ontario and Turnitin.com (http://www.turnitin.com).

Useful Links: the registrar's website (http://www.registrar.uwo.ca), and student support and development services can be found here: http://westernusc.ca/services/. Students who might be in emotional or mental distress should take advantage of Mental Health@Western; a complete list of options can be found here: http://www.uwo.ca/uwocom/mentalhealth/.

Land Acknowledgement

Western University is situated on the traditional territories of the Anishinaabeg, Haudenosaunee, Lunaapeewak and Attawandaron peoples who have longstanding relationships to the land and region of southwestern Ontario and the City of London. The local First Nation communities of this area include Chippewas of the Thames First Nation, Oneida Nation of the Thames, and Munsee Delaware Nation. In the region, there are eleven First Nation communities and a growing Indigenous urban population. Western values the significant historical and contemporary contributions of local and regional First Nations and all of the Original peoples of Turtle Island (North America).
